The club plans to take part in the following projects recommended by the County Home Demonstration Council: Neighborhood

Reds Experiment With Colored Cotton Strains

Moscow, Jan. 23 — (AP) — Pravda said today that Russian experts are showing colored strains of cotton with brown and green fibers and new conducting experiments aimed at developing rose and light blue varieties.

A special correspondent of the Communist Party organ said: "Significant successes have been obtained in development of colored sorts of cotton. On cotton fields in collective farms in the Akkurgan region and state farms number 16 and 17 brown cotton is being sown while in Turkmen green fiber cotton is widely sown."

"Experiments are being conducted for developing a cotton whose fiber is rose and blue."

The article said new long-fiber varieties of cotton also have been developed in experimentation since 1922, "excelling many American varieties in speed of maturing." One variety, the article said, had a fiber 40 millimeters (1.5 inches) long.

There is a greater demand for gasoline and oil products than ever before because there are more motor vehicles, more oil powered farm machinery, more diesel locomotives and giant airliners and hundreds of new oil products.

About 3,500 years ago Jerusalem was an Egyptian village.

Nights: Improvements of clothes line; painting mail boxes; sending a representative to the State Home Demonstration Meeting in September; and sewing for the Arkansas Children's Home and Hospital.

Columbus
The Columbus 4-H Club met at the school at 10:30 a.m. Tuesday, January 18 with County Agents, Oliver Adams and Mary Dixon.

Officers elected were: President, Virginia Ann Mitchell; vice-president, Thomas Mitchell McCormick; secretary, Pat Middlebrooks; and reporter, Buddy Wilson.

Martha Belle Johnson was selected girls safety chairman for the club. The girls filled out cards for the new year and had a round table discussion on safety. The boys discussed their demonstrations for the year and filled out their enrollment cards.

Guernsey
The Guernsey 4-H Club met at 10:20 a.m. January 21 at the school with County Agents, Oliver Adams and Mary Dixon. There were fourteen girls and twenty-one boys present. Officers of the club are: President, Catherine Powell; vice-president, Hershall Martin; secretary, Hazel Daugherty; reporter, J. M. Hurd; and Girls Safety Chairman, Frances Cline.

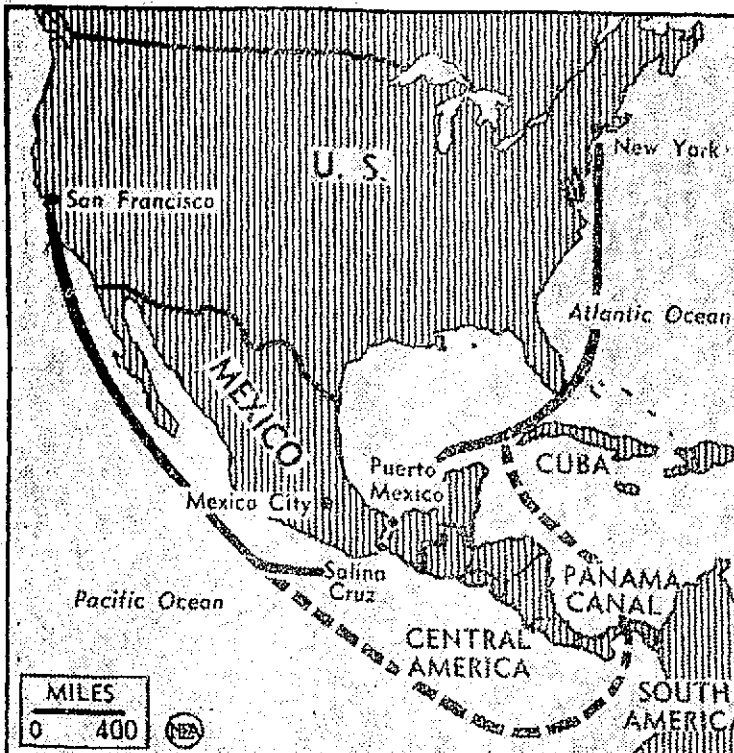

Boys discussed their projects for the new year. The girls studied the 4-H Club ritual and discussed safety.

New Rocking Bed Tested

The slow motion of the bed shown above aids the breathing of patients suffering from respiratory polio. Developed with March of Dimes funds, the bed supplements rather than replaces the respirator, but has the added advantages of improving morale, facilitating treatment and stimulating circulation. The patient shown above at Municipal Hospital in Pittsburgh is John Herman, 19, of Greenwich, Conn. The bed is still undergoing tests.

Suggests New Canal Through Mexico

Sen. Dennis Chavez, D., N. M., has proposed that the United States consider building a new canal between Salina Cruz and Puerto Mexico, in Mexico. Chavez said his proposal would bring the Pacific 2000 miles closer to New York, and would serve as a security measure for the United States. Map above shows present Panama Canal, and proposed canal through Mexico.

OFFICE Nurse

By Adelaide Humphries

© by Adelaide Humphries; Distributed by NEA SERVICE, INC.

THE STORY: Janice Hilary, pretty, efficient, young nurse to popular and handsome society doctor Eric Holbrook, runs his office for him. Eileen McRae, one of the secretaries, has been acting strangely of late. She confides in Janice that her no-good husband, whom she has been living apart, has finally carried out a long-standing threat to kidnap their little girl, Edna Mae. She is afraid to notify the police. Janice calls on Ben Archer for help. He promises to do what he can. Ben has been angry with Janice for breaking their last date without an explanation. Now Janice tells him she went out with Dr. Holbrook that evening. Her excuse for doing it sounds lame, even to Janice. Ben, who has very much, is dismayed when he realizes she is in love with her boss.

XIV
"You know," Betty Jane said to her boy friend, Bill Larkin, as they came out of the movies, "something's gone wrong in our office. I can't for the life of me figure out what it's all about. Something's wrong, but definitely." "It must've been catching," Bill grumbled. Betty Jane had refused to let him hold her hand in the theater. "What's it to you?" he asked. "What makes you think something's wrong?"

"I feel it in my bones," Betty Jane returned bitly. The idea of Bill asking what it was to her! Anything that went on in Dr. Holbrook's office was Betty Jane's concern. "Nothing's the same," she added, thinking aloud. She wished there were some way she could reason out the change that she felt had taken place during the last few weeks, and talking sometimes helped. "For instance," Bill inquired. He knew that Betty Jane, once started on any subject, could not easily be persuaded to drop it. "For instance," Betty Jane said, "Dr. Holbrook. He's different, somehow. He seems kinda worried about something. 'Course it could be his wife's in France. You know, I understand she's got a villa over there in some swell resort. Only I don't think it's the wife. I have a feeling it's someone else."

"It might be Miss Hilary—Aunt Mame thinks it is—and I did give them a start the other day," Betty Jane was thinking aloud again. "It was when I went to the utility room and there they were, the doctor and Janice, and I coulda sworn they were holding hands. Anyhow, he dropped hers quick like, and they both had the funniest, guiltiest look on their faces."

"Didn't your Aunt Mame teach you it's polite always to knock?" Bill grinned catching Betty Jane up for a change.

Betty Jane ignored him with a look. Then she shook her head. "No, it couldn't be that," she decided. "Though they do act funny, almost too polite, as if they were strangers or were sore at each other." But Miss Willows was wrong. "What's Willows got to do with it?" "She said there was no young man Janice might marry. But there is." Betty Jane's smile broadened with satisfaction. "Yeah?" Bill prompted. He had become slightly interested, against his will. "He came to the office," Betty Jane confided. She rested both elbows on the table, her blue eyes dreamy. "And say, he is a right guy! Tall—must be over six-two—broad broad shoulders like a football player. Kinda looks like a cross between Cary Grant and Van Johnson, if you know what I mean."

"Sounds screwy, if you ask me. Those two look nothing alike!" Betty Jane said. "He was only five feet five and he knew he did not resemble any movie or football star."

"Which proves Miss Willows is all wet," Betty Jane said. "Anyhow, it proves Janice could resign and get married, if she wished."

"How 'bout us?" Bill felt he had been patient long enough. It was time they got around to themselves. "What about us?" Her query was as innocent as her baby-blue stare. "As if you didn't know. When you gonna name the day? When you gonna chuck your job and settle down and learn how to cook from your Aunt Mame and—"

"I've told you, Bill," she softened this reminder with a little smile, "we can't just get married. There's a snap of her fingers indicated how quick 'that' was."

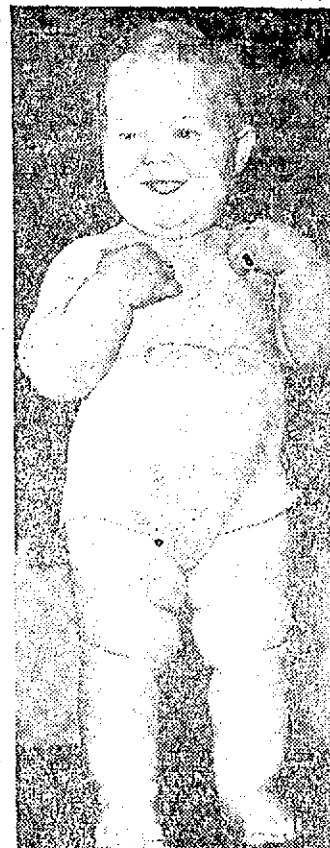

"Yeah, you've been telling me that for almost five years now. Nothing snappy about that, to my way of thinking."

"You know I want to work at my profession at least one full year."

"Oh, rats!" Bill grumbled. "I don't want you to turn into an office nurse; that's the same as an office wife."

"I never heard of such a thing," Betty Jane said with a little air of assumed indignation. "Then, you know, I understand she's got a villa over there in some swell resort. Only I don't think it's the wife. I have a feeling it's someone else."

Good Listener

Did you ever think about a nice pleasant, comfortable world this would be if everybody attended to her own cooking instead of sticking her fingers into your pie?

There is a case in point: A young woman writes me that she is being driven almost crazy by trying to follow the advice given her by her family, friends and neighbors, all of whom are trying to run her life for her. This has gotten her so confused and bewildered that she does not know whether she is coming or going or what she should do or leave undone. And she sums up her problems by saying: "I think I listen to too much talk."

Alas, so do most of us and lending our ears to the gabulous is one of our greatest sources of trouble. For while we recognize the danger of talking too much, we regard listening as an innocent and even a laudable pastime. Yet all of the

Stassen Again Says Pauley Made Profit

Washington, Jan. 23 — (AP) — Harold E. Stassen declared today that Edwin W. Pauley made $10,175 profit on two grain transactions following a speech by Secretary of Agriculture Anderson which depressed the market.

Stassen told a Senate appropriations subcommittee inquiring into Pauley's trading that Pauley took advantage of an "off the cuff" talk by Anderson on Sept. 19 in which Anderson said that grain prices were no realistic.

There statements, which of course were not correct, caused a temporary drop in grain prices, Stassen said.

He made the statement only a few minutes after Pauley pointed a finger at Stassen and demanded that the Republican presidential aspirant be required to confront him "right here, face to face, on the falsehoods he was told about me."

"We are going to give you an opportunity to be heard," Chairman E. A. Tamm said.

"Today?" Pauley demanded. "We are going to give you an opportunity to be heard," Ferguson said again.

Since last September Pauley has been a special assistant to Secretary of the Army Royal. He has provided information usually in official duties profits by speculation on commodities in the last three years.

But Pauley has heatedly denied that he ever had any "inside" government information used in speculation, and has taken offense at Stassen's public charges of profiting by government "insiders."

The Senate committee called both men before it, but was ruled that Pauley may not question Stassen directly. It will allow him to submit in writing later questions to be asked Stassen.

Arkansas Man on Cotton Council

Atlanta, Jan. 24—(AP)—S. R. Nichols of Des Moines, Ark., has been elected a member of the board of directors of the National Cotton Council, which concluded its tenth annual session here yesterday.

Harold A. Young, North Little Rock, Ark., pastor, is the council's new president.

Napoleon Bonaparte was a descendant of an old Indian family and was Frenchman only because the Island of Corsica had joined France the year before he was born.

6:30 a.m. Sunday Evangelistic—7:30 p.m. Bible Study Friday—7:30 p.m. you are always welcome.

And there are the neighbors who feel it their duty to tell Edna that her husband has been seen out to lunch with a pretty young girl or that people are beginning to talk about him and his secretary. Lulu really doesn't believe the cock-and-bull story about her husband being unfaithful to her, but it makes her suspicious—and another marriage has gone on the rocks.

And so it goes. It isn't too much to say that husbands and wives would save thousands of a lot of grief if they would not listen to too much talk, but would regulate their own brains and their own lives by their own common sense.

Tulane's 13th straight victory and Baltimore Loyola's upset triumph over Villanova featured playing on the nation's college basketball courts last night.

The once-beaten Greenies leaders in the Southeastern Conference, registered their 13th straight with a 52-46 win over Mississippi. The winning streak, which began in league competition against no record to 15 wins in 16 starts.

Villanova, regarded as one of the East's leading quieties, went down before Baltimore Loyola, 61-49.
Rucky Mountain College, one of the country's eight remaining undefeated teams, kept its state by bumping Northern Montana, 59-49.

Lawrence Tech squeezed by the tough Tulsa team, 60-58, in a game marked by Tulsa coach pulling his team off the floor in the last second. Coach John Garrison, Tulsa mentor, was irate about never having his players come on the floor for the second half. Tulsa was ahead then, 31-18.

The Northern division of the Pacific Coast Conference continued its four-year-old Washington whipped Oregon 45-24 and Washington State 48-23. Five teams are in running and Oregon State and Washington now lead with 3-2 league records.

Grain of Humor

His role in the current congressional investigation of grain speculators was the theme for the initiation of Secretary of Agriculture Clinton P. Anderson into the famous fun-making Society of Saints and Sinners in New York. Scarecrow on the backdrop is supposed to represent Henry Wallace.

Allies Again Yield to Stalin at Yalta; Russian Head Seizes Underground Leaders

By Stanislaw Mikolajczyk (Former Prime Minister of Poland and President of the Polish Peasant Party)
Edited by Bob Considine

INSTALLMENT 21 (Editor's Note: In today's installation, Stanislaw Mikolajczyk tells how Roosevelt and Churchill again yielded to Stalin at Yalta, how Russia seized leaders of the Polish underground after inviting them to Moscow for "consultations," and how he started for Russia himself despite pointed warnings that he "might have an airplane accident on the way.")

I was succeeded as prime minister of the Polish government in 1945 by Tomasz Arciszewski, veteran Socialist, who had spent most of the war in the Warsaw underground. Arciszewski took office on November 29, 1944, in an atmosphere of deepening despair for Poles at home and abroad.

On December 15 of that year, Prime Minister Churchill changed outlook on Poland was indorsed by the House of Commons.
The Kremlin on January 5, 1945, recognized the Lublin Poles as the official government of Poland.
The Red Army by this time had plunged most of the way across Poland, accepting the aid of the Polish Home Army along the way and then marching on to the Polish patriots soon as each victory was secured.

But Warsaw, a dead city, remained technically in German hands, though it long since had been liberated. By January 17, after it was abundantly obvious that the Home Army of Warsaw had either been completely slaughtered or carried off as prisoners of war, the German and the Germans had been given time sufficient to destroy the city, the Red Army was ordered to move in Stalin, with both a political and a military coup under his belt, now replaced Churchill and Roosevelt at Yalta for what turned out to be the final meeting of these three, who were among the most powerful individuals in history.

The Big Three drew up final military plans for the defeat and capture of Germany, issued a declaration on liberated Europe discussing enemy reparations, the Balkan and the Polish question.
In the case of Poland, Churchill and Roosevelt either yielded again to Stalin or strongly suggested they had secretly reached at Telehran.

In effect they recognized the Lublin Government which Stalin had formed out of Polish Communists, and they approved the Curzon line as the eastern frontier of Poland—thus countenancing the invasion of that 70,000-square-mile area by the Red Army in 1939. Our western frontier would have to await the peace conference.

SPORTS ROUNDUP

By Hugh S. Fullerton, Jr.

Hope Cagers Drop Pair to El Dorado

El Dorado overcame a first quarter lead to pull away from the Bobcats the remainder of the game for a 58 to 28 win last night at the Hope High School gymnasium. The Wildcat Juniors had a much harder time defeating Hope's Juniors 27 to 25 in the opening game.

It was an off night for the Bobcats who had to shoot the ball but couldn't seem to connect, especially when the going was fast. Hope only made a single point the third period but came back to tally eight in the final quarter.

El Dorado led the Junior scorers with 9 points followed by Mitchell and Guiliams of Hope with 8 and 7 each.

attention in these fruitless sessions Harris and Clark-Kerr insisted that I must be among those invited. Molotov refused and to bolster that refusal Stalin wired Churchill that I was "a sabo-teur of the Allied cause."

After the unfortunate death of Roosevelt, President Harry S. Truman, wishing to receive Russia to abide by its Yalta promises, dispatched Harry Hopkins to Moscow to break the deadlock that existed between Harriman and Clark-Kerr on the one side and Molotov on the other.

The deadlock was indeed broken, but only with new appeasement.
Later learned, Stalin consented to go forward with the formation the Provisional Government, but only if Lublin Poles could dominate it.
On June 11 I received an invitation from the Big Three to go to Moscow for consultations. I accepted on the 12th and Moscow immediately announced that the Polish government of the Lublin leaders would begin on the 18th. It was obviously timed to sabotage the Moscow meeting, and force me to stay away because I had named as one of my conditions for attending the release of the Polish democratic leaders before the meeting to form the Provisional Government.

I saw Churchill before I left for Moscow and found him deeply pessimistic about the future of Europe, but vigorous in his determination that the aggression of Russia would not "scale the cliffs of Dover."

This is why I agreed to return:
1. Inside Poland, the Russians were arresting, shooting and deporting leaders of the Polish underground—some of the members of the Home Army and the Lublin government.
2. Russia was dismantling and shipping to the U. S. S. R. a great number of Polish factories. It was also deporting the Polish soldiers whose people were reluctant to collaborate, and removing our livestock and other effects; 3. There were 150,000 members of my Peasant Party Battalion in extreme danger of being annihilated or sent to Siberia and slavery, as was the fate of 40,000 other Home Army men; 4. The 5,000,000 Poles living in that section of Poland which had been given to Russia by Yalta, had to be rescued and removed to safety; 5. There had been repeated appeals to me from inside the country to come to Poland in its defense, and I felt it my duty, as one who had sent Polish soldiers into battle, to share the fate of his own people; in those difficult days; 6. I knew of the impending Potsdam Conference and, knowing that the Lublin Poles would agree to anything Russia proposed, I wanted to make my independent voice heard there;

7. Poland's future had been decided at Teheran and Yalta without representation by the Polish government. Poland had not been invited to the San Francisco Conference. France had appointed a "delegate" to the Lublin Government. The Czechoslovakian government in London had given full recognition to the Lublin government.
Western public opinion had been shaped in such a manner that it was generally agreed that London Poles, having been away from home so long, no longer understood Polish domestic problems and preferred to dissent in order to remain in the comparative luxury of England.

I thus decided to go to Moscow for the consultations with the Big Three, despite two gamblers warning I received just before leaving London. One of these was contained in a British paper unframed to me. I suggested that I probably would be arrested as soon as I set foot on Soviet soil.
The other warning was more direct. It came from a Polish Communist named Koziejko, who had close contact with the Russian Embassy in London.

"You know, Mikolajczyk," he said with elaborate unconcern, "you might have an airplane accident on the way to Moscow, or even be killed two gamblers warning after you get there. I don't think you should go."
I left June 16, 1945.
